Dear Councilman Hobson:

I hope you will support the program outlined by Gilbert Hahn, Jr., in his excellent letter in this morning's Washington Post:

1. Completion of the full 98 mile Metro system.
2. Levying of a Metro tax to support it.

Sincerely yours

W.T. Purdum

P.S. The tax would of course have to be levied by all jurisdictions served by Metro.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Financing the Metro System

Four years ago, you printed an article of mine presenting the case for a Metro Tax. The Metro Tax, as it was then proposed by the Metro staff (as an alternative to a Federal Guarantee of Bonds) was a one-half of one per cent tax on all of us in the jurisdictions served by the subway.

The Metro Tax was rejected at that time. The time to revive the proposal is at hand. At that time, four years ago, in the article, I said:

"No one knows, of course, how much the subway system will ultimately cost. We think that now it will cost $3 billion but three years from now we may have an entirely different estimate and there is going to be the need for an ever-present tax source to meet the rising needs of the subway (for example like the freeway system). There is no tax that is fairer or more appropriate for this purpose than a Metro tax that is levied on the people who benefit from it."

All of us in the region to be served by Metro should be grateful that we have gone as far as we have with contributions from the federal government and a federal guarantee of the general revenue bonds.

Now, however, the danger that I predicted has taken place. The federal government is now asking for a plan to reduce the 98.5 mile metrorail system by 52 miles. And, the federal government is in a position to insist upon such a cut, precisely because it is contributing two-thirds of the cost as well as guaranteeing up to $900 million in general revenue bonds.

Not only is this a danger, but it is clear now that the cost of the system will continue to increase and a continuous source of revenue is going to be needed to meet the deficits of the bus system and the subway system when it commences operations. Who is going to use the bus system or the subway if it costs $1 or more to ride on it?

The rising costs, the deficits, and finally the demand of the federal government for cut-backs were all inevitable four years ago. And, they are now here.

Cutting the Metrorail system or halting the subway construction is unacceptable.

The time has come for those of us who will use and benefit from the subway system to ask to authorize a Metro tax that will provide a continuous source of revenue to support the bonds, to build the system and to meet the expected deficits of its operation.

Gilbert Hahn Jr.
Former Chairman,
D.C. City Council

Washington.

It's heartening to see The Post join citizens who have long raised "danger signals for Metro." The system needs rethinking. Perhaps its present financial crunch will force public officials to take another look at the basic assumptions. Conceived in a pre-beltway era, Metro's purpose should not be to bring droves of new suburbanites back to the city if only for an eight hour work day. Nor should Metro serve the planner's dream of a radial city with massive development at most stations. It should serve the taxpaying citizens and their neighborhood, not developers who have rushed in to reap the profits of Metro-induced development.

In a reassessment I suggest that public officials get behind a push for a capital gains tax on the increased worth of properties near Metro stations. This way some of the great public expenditure could be recaptured. Also, I suggest that it may not be too late to delete some stations in the core of the system. In 1971 the Arlington County Board was asked to consider deleting the Ballston Station, one of five within two miles from Rosslyn to Glebe Road. All but one Board member responded that we'd be giving up "something for nothing." According to the Cost Allocation Formula, savings to the system revert to the entire system, not to the county's portion. The Cost Allocation Formula should be changed to encourage cutbacks within core, rather than the other alternative of forced cutbacks at its ends which better serve the commuting public.

Oil Spill Hits Harbor In Norfolk

By Ronald Taylor

Washington Post Staff Writer

An estimated 25,000 gallons of oil spread over a four-mile area in the Norfolk harbor and cleanup crews from the Coast Guard, Navy and private firms were working yesterday to clean up the spill, a Coast Guard spokesman said.

The spill came from the vicinity of the Navy's Craney Island fuel depot, according to the Coast Guard, but both Navy and Coast Guard officials said the source had not been definitely determined.

About 8,000 gallons had been gathered up by yesterday afternoon and much of the rest had been contained in three pier areas.

The oil spread over an area from Craney Island in Portsmouth to the Norfolk Naval Base to Norfolk International terminal.

It reached several estuaries, the Coast Guard said, but posed no immediate danger to fish and wildlife and had caused only "minor" property damage.

The Coast Guard estimated that it would take at least five days to clean up the oil and debris in the harbor from the spill.

Booms designed to contain such spills were used and bowl-shaped devices known as skimmers were being used to gather up the oil.

The skimmers rest just beneath the water's surface and the oil is scooped from the water over the sharpened edge of the device through suction tubes.

Evidence of an oil spill began showing up in the harbor Friday when discoloration of the water was spotted. Since Saturday the area has been under helicopter surveillance, the Coast Guard spokesman said.

"There has been no report of any wildlife or fish killed because of the spill," he said.

He also said, "The spill apparently came from a one-time discharge" and not a continuous leak.

Mr. Robert R. Elliott
General Counsel
U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development
451 - 7th Street, S.W. Room #10214
Washington, D.C. 20401

Dear Mr. Elliott:

I am writing on behalf of P. I. Properties, Inc., who manages the property in the District of Columbia known as the Clifton Terrace Apartments at 1308, 1312 and 1350 Clifton Street, N.W. The property is owned by the U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (a so-called Secretary-held property), with whom P. I. Properties has the property management contract.

Over the last 2 or 3 months we have experienced many fires on the property -- the number and frequency of which is outside the scope of mere accidents, kids, drunks or people with psychological problems; and we have experienced serious drain and sewage stoppage and resultant water backup and leakage overflows which themselves are beyond the number and frequency of normal stoppage and backup. Let me give you some sense of what I mean with respect to some statistics on the sewer stoppage problem:

1. Since P. I. Properties has managed the property (namely, since May 16, 1974) to the present, there have been over twenty (20) stoppages for which we had to call an outside plumber to clear the stoppage. Since P. I. Properties has the equipment and manpower to clear most normal stoppage problems, all of these are abnormal and very serious (and expensive) stoppages.

2. The materials which have been identified as causing these stoppages include plastic baggies (several filled with sand), steel wool, sand, bricks, balloons, beer cans, etc.

3. Of the twenty plus stoppages which have occurred, twelve (12) have occurred since November 20, 1974. In short, there has been a recent escalation in such stoppages.

The bricks, cans, balloons, bags of sand, and other debris which has been found to be causing the stoppage is most likely being dropped down the stacks which vent on the roofs.

All evidence in respect to the stoppages and the fires points to sabotage. Somebody or some group seems intent on hurting HUD or P. I. Properties, and is costing the U.S. taxpayers a great deal of money. For example, one fire alone cost in excess of two thousand dollars ($2000) to repair the damage caused. The damage being caused is beyond tenant abuse and mere vandalism. Indeed, we believe that such damage may be planned or purchased by someone who wants this cooperative effort by HUD and P. I. Properties (this "demonstration project" as it has been termed) to fail.

There are several potential "enemy" groups or individuals who may very well have a vested interest in such failure. P. I. Properties has broken up a burglary ring and a narcotics ring since it has been managing the property. We have stopped people from receiving welfare checks illegally, under assumed names and living at Clifton Terrace. We have stopped people from receiving rent supplement benefits who were not entitled to receive them. We have stopped tenants from living free without paying their rent, which was rampant when P. I. Properties took over the property management of Clifton Terrace -- evicting some tenants who simply would not pay their rent.

P. I. Properties has attempted to use minority contractors whenever possible to perform the maintenance and repair jobs and to provide the supplies and materials needed to operate the development. This practice itself may have angered some non-minority contractors to a point of such sabotage actions. Or, perhaps some contractors (in this time of recession and economic downturn) are simply trying to create more work for themselves.

The efforts of P. I. Properties in rejuvenating the Clifton Terrace Apartments and turning the property around may threaten the interests of some real estate operators who profit by picking up old properties from HUD and elsewhere, letting them continue to deteriorate physically, and using the depreciation tax write-offs to shelter income from other sources. There are some such real estate operators who most likely do not want to see this "national demonstration project" succeed -- for they would then begin to lose their part of the market.

Or, perhaps P. I. Properties is inheriting a problem which goes back to the period when the Clifton Terrace Apartments were being renovated under Winston Burdette, who was backed by Boise-Cascade. As you must be aware (from the kickback allegations and the litigation presently in the courts), many of the physical problems of the property go back to this renovation period. Even then the allegations of extreme vandalism and sabotage were rampant concerning tenants who might be sabotaging the operations simply to get or remain on the payroll of Burdette.

There are many motives and reasons for such sabotage as mentioned above. The damage being caused now is far beyond normal wear and tear and strongly suggests a pattern of sabotage. Thus we at P. I. Properties are writing you to request a full-scale investigation of the matter. Other sections and offices of HUD have not, to date, performed an investigation of this matter, even though such has been requested by P. I. Properties.

We request an investigation of all the various groups and/or individuals which would like to see "the demonstration" fail -- as mentioned above, tenants, contractors, real estate operators, etc. Moreover, in addition to what you and your office initiates on behalf of HUD, we are also requesting that the Federal Bureau of Investigation be brought into the investigation from its beginning. For it is a serious enough matter to the interests of HUD to warrant such action from the FBI.

I shall appreciate your immediate time and attention to this most urgent and serious matter; and I shall be awaiting your response.

Sincerely yours,

Mary Treadwell Barry

Dear Julius:

First, may I congratulate you on your election to membership on the City Council. Having known you as the "gadfly" who kept the DC Schools in some semblance of compliance with the law, I know you will be a much needed asset to the Council.

I am sure that you are aware that the recent appointment of the new police chief by the Mayor was Board of Trade orchestrated. I think that the basic issue at stake is that Chief Cullinane is not a resident of the District. He and all other top DC government heads should live, vote and pay taxes in the District, not in a neighboring county. There is no other city jurisdiction in the country where this is not strictly enforced.

I hope that under your sponsorship a regulation will be introduced that will require all DC Department Heads to live in the city and, if not a resident at the time of assuming office, require them to move to the city within 6 months of accepting their position.

Wishing you much success in your newest challenge.

Dear Mr. Councilman:

I certainly am most hopeful that this letter finds the status of your health, as for your family, quite well, i.e., bordering on that of the very superb.

I have kept abreast of your humanitarian philosophy and efforts, dating back to your now famous, "Wright v. Board of Education"

Although, I approach the age of thirty-four, (34) I can recollect, somewhat clearly the impact, the shame and embarrassment in being classified as a dummy, (slow) nevertheless, that positive, successful encounter surely has saved innumerable children, psychologically.

I now, respectfully, request your strength, wit and comprehension quite solemnly again, for as fate has it, I am a penal statistic currently, institutionalized at, no matter (you guessed it) but the District's facility at Lorton.

I am prepared to re-enter the community in the near future (within sixty days) and my concern, understandably surrounds the gratuity that one is supposed to be in receipt of prior to his release.

The alleged procedure is something like - you receive fifty dollars, ($50) if you have been a resident of the prison a year, and if not, you receive but a scant ten dollars ($10), moreover, I was told that I would be lucky if I received the latter.

I would be very appreciative if you would look into this prior to my release. (Within sixty days)

It seemingly appears to me that all this department (corrections) does is deal in statistics, e.g., escapes, assaults, recidivist rate and the similar, but in all profound actuality, a mere fifty dollars ($50) in a month sum, (though better than none) with the recession, unemployment rate, particularly pertaining to those who have been released from incarceration or consider others like myself, with positively no one to take you in or occasionally send you (me) something to supplement the pathetic three dollars ($3) a month they allot me. (Note: I honestly can't bring myself to utter that it is so wages, but ten cents a day, why even a child receives more.) In addition to the aforementioned, what is a man to do when he is released from confinement with no where to go, no money on his person, no one to turn to?

The reply is but a single phrase, crime prone. On the reverse side of the coin, the rationalization on behalf of the parole board, the decision makers, in all probability will be the tendency to hold upon his particular case, in conclusion the resident is still the victim.

Perhaps the aforementioned can be eradicated if you would scrutinize the procedures, why's, how's, etc..

I earnestly trust that you will take heed and encounter the higher personnel and report to me in time.

Have a splendid day!

Dear Mr. Hobson:

I oppose both proposed gun legislation acts. My reasons are as follows:

1. Currently Washington, DC has one of the most stringent gun control regulations in the country, and it has done nothing to get the guns off the streets.
2. Both proposed regulations violate my constitutional rights and will do nothing more to get the guns off the streets than the current legislation.
3. No gun control legislation will do any more than disarm and inconvenience honest citizens. The solution is not legislation, but to get the criminal off the street--a gun is an inanimate object.

Dear Councilmember-at-Large Holson:

I would like to urge your strong support for Bill No. 1-89, especially with respect to the no-fault divorce provisions, recently introduced by Councilmember Averington Dixon.

In a letter to Councilmember Dixon (copy attached), I have suggested an amendment to Section 905 to make this a more timely act for thousands of District of Columbia residents.

I feel that it is important to express my feelings about this Bill to you and the other Councilmembers-at-Large as well as the Councilmember from my ward - I hope all of you will be supporters of the Bill and my suggested amendment.

Dear Councilmember Dixon:

I wish to greatly commend you for introducing Bill No. 1-89, especially with respect to the no-fault divorce provisions. It is extremely gratifying that the District of Columbia now has the potential to implement a more meaningful and realistic divorce law--an action already taken by 45 states which have adopted some form of no-fault divorce law.

I would like to take this opportunity to strongly recommend that an amendment to Section 905 be made which would provide that this Act be effective immediately upon approval or some minimal time period.

thereafter in lieu of January 5, 1976 in the event that a quick passage is likely. This would contribute much to your objective "to provide for an amicable and swift dissolution of a marriage which has suffered irretrievable breakdown" for those persons who have already reached or are nearing the proposed 180 day separation requirement. Undoubtedly, thousands of residents would benefit greatly from an earlier effective date.

For instance, my own marriage which will not be reconciled under any circumstances could be dissolved now. Otherwise, I must continue to live at least six more months in this very difficult state of neither being married or single with little control over my fate; my only other options in the District of Columbia are to attempt to use one or more of the other unpleasant grounds currently available which are difficult to prove, expensive to pursue, and traumatic to endure.

Fortunately, I was already gainfully employed since I must maintain the residence in all respects as well as two rental properties and support my two children during this period of stalemate. My "husband" has refused all efforts at formalizing a separation agreement even though it favored him with substantially more than half of our assets. I was willing to make this sacrifice to obtain a formal commitment to end an absolutely intolerable situation. Yet, he is currently employed in another state but assumes no responsibility except for his own maintenance in that state -- a state which, ironically enough, has a no-fault divorce law. Certainly, there are many persons in similar positions and in positions more unfortunate than I am who may need to revert to welfare for survival and/or lose properties to which they have made substantial financial contributions.

Let me again stress my strong support for your Bill and urge you to add this one single revision to greatly alleviate the unnecessary problems being incurred and endured by thousands of District of Columbia residents. Please let me know if there is anything I can personally contribute toward the speedy passage of this Bill-- either as a resident of the District of Columbia or as one who shares your systems / management analysis background.

I will send copies of this letter to my ward councilmember as well as the councilmembers-at-large and urge them to strongly support your Bill.

Sincerely,

Barbara Porterfield

A CALL TO ACTION

You're Never Too Young To Fight Ageism

The life expectancy for a woman is 74 years. At 40 she is just past the halfway mark. What can she expect for the second half of her life? If things continue the way they are, the likelihood is poverty. Of those women over 65, 47 percent have incomes of less than $2,000 per year, and only 12 percent receive $5,000 per year or more. (And this includes all those rich widows who are supposed to own most of the nation's wealth.) The situation is getting worse, not better. The picture for men is no bed of roses, but the greatest increase in poverty is for women 65 and over who are living alone.

Since women are assumed to be dependents, they are paid less and are restricted in employment. And because the youth cult goes double for women, sexism is compounded as a woman grows older. Since physical attractiveness is equated with youth, a woman's self-image can deteriorate as she struggles with every new wrinkle. Health problems multiply, and, too often, menopause is approached as a lonely, painful journey. Also in the middle years, marriages may flounder or end by widowhood. Add poverty to all these problems, and you approach barrel bottom.

Despite increasing pressure from the Women's Movement, breakthroughs have had little impact on women 40 and over. Employment rates have been improving somewhat for younger women, but for those 45 and over, they are declining. (And that doesn't take into account the many who have given up job-hunting because it seemed hopeless.) The Age Discrimination Act passed in 1967 is a nice gesture, but seldom enforced. Partly, that's our fault, because so many of us have become convinced that there is something wrong with us, or feel, "what's the use—that's the way it is, so why fight it?"

We've been agonizing about injustices for quite a while now, and the time is ripe to organize to bring about some changes—small ones as well as major ones, short-term as well as long-term goals. We may not benefit directly on much that we do. Younger women may be the greatest beneficiaries. But by taking up arms (figuratively) against injustice, we will sweep away the negative messages that we have internalized. We will unleash in ourselves extraordinary new energy. We are the first generation that has had to come face to face with problems of longevity, and the first to have to deal with the question of ageism. Those of us in the middle years—in the adolescence of aging—have the greatest potential, and stake, in fighting back. —Tish Sommers (Adapted from "Call for Action," in Prime Time.)

A new bill for "displaced homemakers" has been developed by the NOW Task Force on Older Women working with Representatives Yvonne Brathwaite Burke (D.-Calif.) and Charles Wilson (D.-Calif.). The bill is an attempt to meet the needs of women in their middle years who have lost their position as a homemaker because of widowhood, divorce, or loss of family income or federal assistance.

"Displaced homemakers," between the ages of 35 and 65, can find themselves without any source of income, ineligible for categorical welfare assistance or medicare and too young to qualify for Social Security benefits. The legislation would provide for employment services and health care through programs set up by the Health, Education, and Welfare Department. Community centers would be established to provide job training with a stipend paid to trainees. Research programs could also be funded under the proposal.

The bill will be referred to the House Ways and Means Committee (Representatives Al Ullman [D.-Ore.] and Herman Schneebeli [R.-Pa.] are ranking members) and the Senate Finance Committee (Senators Russell Long [D.-La.] and Carl Curtis [R.-Neb.]). Background information is available from Tish Sommers, NOW Task Force on Older Women, 434 66th Street, Oakland, California 94609.

(For information on other legislative issues of concern to older women—such as pension, Social Security, and welfare reform—see the Ms. "Gazette," March, 1975, pages 97-100.)

—Wendy Wank

SINCE THIS ARTICLE WAS PUBLISHED, the "Equal Opportunities Bill for Displaced Homemakers" (H.R. 7003) was introduced (May 14th), by Rep. Yvonne Burke, and a similar Bill will be introduced in the Senate, with Senator John Tunney as prime sponsor.

REP. YVONNE BURKE INTRODUCES BILL TO PROVIDE ASSISTANCE TO DISPLACED HOMEMAKERS

Rep. YVONNE B. BURKE (D-CA) recently introduced a bill (H.R. 7003) which will provide assistance to homemakers who have been displaced from a previous family role in which they were dependent on another family member for income. "The displaced homemaker is often left without any source of income," Rep. Burke said. "They are frequently ineligible for social security benefits because they are too young, or because they are divorced from the family wage earner. They are ineligible for Federal assistance if they are not physically disabled and their children are past a certain age. They are ineligible for unemployment insurance because they have been engaged in unpaid labor in the home, while at the same time they are often subject to discrimination in seeking employment because of age, sex and lack of any recent paid work experience." She explained that her bill provides for job counseling, job training, health education counseling, financial management services and education assistance to be administered by the Community Services Administration of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Said Rep. Burke: "The Chase Manhattan Bank estimates that if the strictly household services of a homemaker were paid for they would cost $8,285 per year; yet there is no unemployment insurance for a homemaker who is 'laid off.' For this reason my bill also calls for a study and a report back to Congress on the feasibility of unemployment compensation for displaced homemakers. It is my belief that such compensation should be made available." She explained that the study is to be conducted by the Director of the Community Services Administration, through coordination with the Secretary of Labor and the Secretary of HEW, and a final report is to be submitted not later than one year after enactment of the bill.

Older Women Fight

H.R. 7003 by Rep. Yvonne B. Burke

NEW HOPE FOR DISPLACED HOMEMAKERS

April, 1975 -- An EQUAL OPPORTUNITY FOR DISPLACED HOMEMAKERS ACT is in final stages of preparation by the staff of Rep. Yvonne Brathwaite Burke (Dem. CA). Next, it will be circulated among members of the House to solicit co-sponsorships. Then it will be introduced, receive a number, and be referred to a subcommittee of the House Education and Labor Committee. With enough supporters, it will get through the committees and onto the House floor.

Meanwhile, legislative staff of Senators Tunney & Cranston are considering a companion Senate bill. As soon as the House version is completed they will get to work on it. In the Senate, the bill would probably be referred to the Labor & Public Welfare Committee.

As now written, the Burke Bill would:

- * Provide MULTIPURPOSE SERVICE PROGRAMS to utilize the skills, training and experience of displaced homemakers. Included are health education and menopausal clinics, employment counseling and training, and additional services as determined by the displaced homemakers themselves.
- * Provide unemployment insurance for displaced homemakers in the same manner as to other persons who have lost their jobs.
- * Include displaced homemakers among those receiving attention by Federal agencies and programs designed to assist persons disadvantaged in securing employment.

MORE GOOD NEWS: A state version has just been introduced by Sen. Jerome Smith (Dem. Santa Clara). This will provide a demonstration multiservice center for displaced homemakers, to pioneer new job categories utilizing the life experience of former homemakers in a broader social setting. It would also provide supportive social services during the period of transition. This is Senate Bill, No. 825.

The state and national bills are seen as complimenting each other. The modestly funded California version would provide a model for similar centers to be set up where needed throughout the country.

NOW THE REAL WORK STARTS

YES, this legislation has a good chance of passing IF enough grass roots clamour in its favor is heard by the legislators from their constituents. Try these suggestions below and you will be amazed by the results:

1. Belong to an organization? Write a brief letter of support, then ask them to adopt it and write it on organizational letterhead. Write to one or more of the following: your U.S. Senators; your Congressman; Rep. Burke. Organizational letters are especially important at this stage.
2. Are you a displaced homemaker? Describe your own situation in a letter to your Congressman. Ask him/her to co-sponsor the bill

For Their Rights

3. Live in California? Write your state Senator asking his support. Organizational letters, too. Ask for copy of the Smith Bill, number S. 825.
4. Have you media contacts? See if you can get a story placed or a TV appearance, or a radio interview.
5. Know some displaced homemakers? Get a Displaced Homemakers group (or committee or task force) going to implement the above. All have had considerable community experience. Now is the time to use it in the interests of many such women in deplorable situations.

USEFUL FACTS FOR ACTION

Who are the Displaced Homemakers?

These are women who have fulfilled a role as a homemaker, who find themselves "displaced" in their middle years, through divorce, widowhood, or other loss of family income. They are ineligible for AFDC if their children are over 18. They are subject to the highest unemployment rate of any sector of the work force. They face discrimination in employment because they are women, older and have no recent paid work experience. They are ineligible for unemployment insurance because they have been engaged in unpaid labor in the home. They are ineligible for Social Security because they are too young. Some will never be eligible because they are divorced and fall through the cracks of the S.S. system. Often they have lost their rights as beneficiaries under employers pension and health plans through divorce or widowhood, despite many years of contribution to the family well-being. Many lose Medical coverage and are unacceptable for private health insurance plans.

How many are there? Is the problem widespread?

An exact figure is hard to find, because homemakers don't often appear in government statistics. Since their economic contribution is not recognized, and they receive no benefits, their status is officially ignored. But in 1973 there were 1.1 million formerly married women under 60, without minor children, who were not in the labor force. In addition many more of the 6.1 million married women, not working, without minor children, are potentially displaced homemakers. Rough estimates on the number who fit the description are 1 to 3 million.

Why is there such a problem?

The changing status of the family has caught older women unprotected. The divorce rate has doubled between 1960-1973. There has been an increase of 46% in the number of households headed by women in ten years. One fourth of the divorces filed are after more than 15 years of marriage. The trend is toward no-fault dissolution of marriage and spousal support for limited periods, if at all. Increasing number of older women live without men. There are more than four times as many widows as widowers. The older women become, the more likely they are to be on their own.

What about existing programs? Aren't these women included?

"Manpower" programs are just that, with some inroads by younger women. CETA (Concentrated Employment Training Agency) has few if any job training categories available to older women. Until the special needs of displaced homemakers are officially recognized, their problems are simply ignored by all existing agencies.

Dear Sir:

I am the Child Health editor on The New York Amsterdam News. This weekly newspaper will publish in February, 1976, a special Bicentennial edition recognizing and honoring Blacks who have made contributions to America in the past 200 years.

The newspaper has invited me to write an article on "200 years of Haitian contributions to America."

I am writing to ask if you know of Haitians who have made their mark in America from its founding to the present time, or are aware of possible sources for this information.

Thank you for your help.

Very sincerely yours,

Dear Doctor Patrick:

The Bicentennial has arrived and as usual, the positive contributions related to the Black experience in America has escaped mention, much less amplification. If the history of Black people in America is to be molded for posterity and the edification of our children and their children's children, it must be recorded in an orderly fashion by contemporary Black statesmen and journalists. To this end, we respectfully request that you join us in our production of a chronicle of 200 years of the Black American Experience.

As you know, we are the largest Black oriented local newspaper in the United States and we feel compelled and obligated to rise to the occasion and accept the challenge to fill the void that the white oriented press has created by its omissions. Therefore, on February 18, 1976, the New York Amsterdam News will publish a 256-page special Black Bicentennial Issue. It will consist of 16 sections, each section of which will be devoted to a specific area of contribution by Blacks as they have flowed into the American mainstream. This will be the most comprehensive, important, single edition of any Black oriented newspaper in the history of the 140-year-old Black press. We shall print 256,000 copies which will generate a readership of 1,280,000 during the first year. Libraries and schools will peruse it for years to come.

But we cannot do it alone. We need your help. And because of your particular knowledge and expertise, we invite you to write an article of 1500 to 2000 words on 200 Years of Haitian Contributions to America.

As you might conjecture, we are excited about this Black Bicentennial issue and we feel certain that our ebullience is infectious. Please give us your positive answer within the next week. Because of press schedules and the enormity of this undertaking, we will need your completed article together with a favorite picture of yourself by ~~October 31, 1975.~~

Feel free to call me concerning any aspect of this endeavor.

Most sincerely,

Un Haitien Laisse son Empreinte aux U.S.A.

Dr. Thomas William Patrick Sr.

Un médecin-pharmacien né en Haïti, il y a plus d'un siècle, et mort aux États-Unis en 1953, a été l'objet des honneurs formels et spéciaux du Sénat de l'État de New Jersey, au cours d'une séance tenue à Trenton, la capitale de cet État, au mois de juillet 1964.

En effet, le Sénat de New Jersey a voté une résolution commémorant la mémoire du Dr. Thomas William Patrick à cause de son exceptionnelle carrière et de ses grands services rendus à la société.

Né en Haïti le 11 novembre 1872, il fit des études en sciences pharmaceutiques à Trinidad où il avait vé-cu pendant plusieurs années, puis émigra aux États-Unis. Il s'installa à Boston où il étudia la médecine au « Collège of Physicians and Surgeons ». Il fut diplômé en 1894. Il devint citoyen américain en 1897 et fonda cette même année la « Patrick School of Pharmacy » qui a formé des pharmaciens noirs et blancs venus de tous les États de l'Union et de plusieurs autres pays étrangers.

A part l'institution qu'il a fondée à Boston, Dr. Thomas Patrick a écrit deux livres sur la pharmacologie qui l'ont bel et bien placé parmi les autorités en la matière. Il détenait une licence en pharmacologie dans six différents États des États-Unis.

Nombre de diplômés de son école ont eu une brillante carrière dans cette science. Dr. Patrick disait avec fierté que le premier candidat à réussir aux examens pour la licence du Massachusetts Board of Registration in Pharmacy en vertu de la nouvelle loi de 1903 connue sous le vocable « The Eighth Decennial Revision of Pharmacopeia » était diplômé de son école.

Dr. Patrick a un fils, Thomas Patrick Jr. diplômé de Harvard University et Berlin Medical School, qui est également celui qui écrit les colonnes traitant des questions médicales de AMSTERDAM NEWS. Il a également laissé une fille qui a fait sa carrière dans la musique.

A l'approche du bi-centenaire de l'Indépendance américaine, il est approprié de rendre hommage à tous les étrangers qui ont contribué à la grandeur des États-Unis. Pour les Haïtiens, le Dr. Thomas W. Patrick est un sujet de fierté. Dire qu'il existe beaucoup d'Haïtiens dont l'apport à la civilisation américaine demeure peu négligeable. Cependant faute d'informations ils sont méconnus. Il a fallu la diligence du fils de ce grand homme, le Dr. Thomas W. Patrick Jr., pour que ce journal parvienne à la découverte d'un des plus dignes fils que notre pays ait produit et dont les haïtiens doivent s'ennorgueillir à bon droit.

HON. ROBERT A. ROE

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, as we move forward into America's Bicentennial 200th anniversary celebration in commemoration of the founding of our country, it is indeed fitting and most appropriate to honor and reflect upon the extraordinary achievements of outstanding Americans whose lives, deeds, and service to their fellowman epitomize to the highest degree the opportunities and challenges of free men and women in a representative democracy. It is my privilege and honor to place before the Congress for recording in the annals of our historic journal of Congress the success story of Dr. Thomas W. Patrick, a native of the Republic of Haiti, who chose our country for his citizenship and achieved the American dream for himself and his many, many students in a noble and illustrious career as outstanding educator, pharmacist, and practicing physician in the extremely complex profession of compounding and dispensing medicines.

Dr. Patrick, a black man, was born in Haiti, West Indies on November 11, 1872. He attended school in Trinidad, British West Indies, where he received his pharmaceutical education. He immigrated to America and settled in Boston in 1892 where he resided until his death on March 5, 1953.

By his strength of character and standards of excellence, Dr. Patrick does indeed symbolize the American dream and I appreciate the opportunity of presenting to you his historic noteworthy achievements as related to me by one of the most esteemed pharmacists in my congressional district and the State of New Jersey, Dr. Gabriel C. Roberto, who is a graduate of the Patrick School of Pharmacy established by Dr. Patrick in Boston in 1892.

During his first year on American soil Dr. Patrick began teaching and founded the Patrick School of Pharmacy in Boston. His educational endeavors not only included the conduct of classes in his school of pharmacy but he established correspondence courses, spanning the globe in providing courses of study to some of our most proficient pharmacists throughout the United States and in many foreign countries. In addition to his success as tutor, teacher, and school administrator, he authored exceptionally outstanding books on pharmacy which have attained acclaim by many learned authorities on the subject.

Dr. Patrick was married and had two children, Thomas W. Patrick, Jr., a graduate of Harvard University and the Berlin Medical School, and a daughter, Charlotte, who is a graduate of the Conservatory of Music.

In 1897, Dr. Patrick became a naturalized citizen and it is interesting to note that his personal individual philosophy which brought him to America was the inherent doctrine of American tradition established by our forefathers. He was known to state on many occasions:

If an individual, regardless of his color or nativity, sets out with determination to become proficient in any profession, that person will succeed, provided he or she becomes well grounded in the fundamentals.

He particularly stressed his philosophy of reaching out and learning the fundamentals as the key to success with his own people claiming they can succeed if they grasp and persevere to achievement in the opportunities and challenges afforded to them.

Mr. Speaker, it is indeed a privilege and honor to present this commemorative tribute to a great American, Dr. Thomas W. Patrick, whose lifetime of good works in the health care of our people has indeed left a legacy to all of us through his writings and his teachings which will be passed on from generation to generation because he took the time to care, enlighten our young people, and made a difference in the quality of our way of life in America. We commemorate and salute Dr. Thomas W. Patrick, Sr. of Boston, Mass.

Dear Mr. Julius Hobson

I think people should not smoke because it will give them cancer and it is bad for their lungs.

Since you are a school board member, I wrote this letter to you because maybe you can help people stop smoking.

When people smoke other people inhale the smoke, and sometime it get into people clothes. That's bad when they are going somewhere.

And I hope you don't smoke

Dear Sir:

As a Law student at Georgetown University Law Center, I am both aware and involved in the law as it is now and how it stands to be improved for tomorrow. I don't feel the interests of American citizens will be furthered by restricting their rights. Thus I feel that any increase in safety to be gained through Gun Control bills #1-104 and 1-296 (which will effectively be negligible) is more than outweighed by the limits imposed on individuals' freedom.

I disagree with plans to make people safe by stripping them of the opportunity to make right or wrong for themselves. Furthermore, Gun Control burdens only the law-abiding citizens. Help make the courts tougher on convicted criminals, or re-habilitate those who have gone wrong, don't take away any rights: the rights of an up-standing citizen.

Thank you for listening to my views.

Dear Sir:

I am writing about the proposed new gun control bills as follows:

- a. Please do not enact them, or any further gun control laws.
- b. Present gun control laws are too restrictive to the law abiding citizen.
- c. Criminals use guns in criminal defiance of gun control laws, therefore laws are not effective to them.
- d. The D.C. is already in debt. Further gun laws will create more debt and compound the futility.
- e. The proposed bills are discriminatory to the law abiding citizen, and restrict the right of self defense. Furthermore the transient law abiding citizens are unreasonably restricted.

f. One of the reasons good citizens possess guns is for self defense. Conversely criminals criminally possess guns for aggression toward the good citizens. The role of the police is only after the fact of aggression and useless in self defense.

Dear Ms. Proctor:

Thank you for your letter of October 8, 1976 concerning the retention of $623,000 for day care services with the budget of the Department of Human Resources and the continued funding of $700,000 for day care services within the Model Cities Program.

Earlier this month the Committee on Human Resources and the Aging voted to recommend to the Budget Committee and the Council that the $623,000 earmarked for day care services remain in DHR. I intend to support this recommendation in the Council.

In addition the Council voted last June to approve the District of Columbia application for the Federal Community Development Program Assistance Grant which would give to the District approximately $42 million for housing needs. That grant allocates $660,000 for day care services through the Model Neighborhoods Program and would allow the present day care program to continue through the next year.

1. Retain the $623,000 that D.H.R. requested to be diverted from day care services. Mr. Yeldell made this request in his testimony before the Council Committee on Human Resources and Aging.
2. I ~~note~~ ^{request} the continued funding ($700,00) for the Model Cities portion of the day care program. These funds are currently allocated from the Department of Housing and Community Development.

Dear Mr. Hobson:

This congregation, having been established in 1822, and having been in the same location since 1886, is proud to have been designated a National Historical Landmark by the United States Department of the Interior.

Acknowledging the great historical legacy which we have, the church has elected to remain in the present location and has taken on the project of the complete restoration of the edifice. For the past year, the exterior of the building has been undergoing the restoration process and the work is now near completion.

On December 5, 1976 we will have a "Celebration of Renaissance" to commemorate the Christian works and perseverance of our forebears and to rekindle our spirits as we go forth with thanksgiving to complete the project of interior renovation. Because of the important part this church has played in the history of the nation and the District of Columbia, and the importance of the continued urban ministry, we are inviting the entire community to join with us in this celebration. We extend a special invitation to you to join with us at the 4 o'clock hour.

We look forward to having you with us and for your support as we go about our task.

Metropolitan AME Plans Restoration

By Janis Johnson
Washington Post Staff Writer

In 1850 the Union Bethel African Methodist Episcopal Church Society, an outgrowth of the first AME congregation in the District of Columbia, bought a plot of land on M Street NW to build a church of its own.

Intermittently for more than 30 years, the church of free blacks and slaves labored to construct a house of worship. They even tore down their temporary quarters, Union Bethel Hall a block and a half away, and washed and scraped the bricks for reuse in the new church.

In 1886 the church, which had been finished under the direction of architect-contractor Samuel G. T. Morsell at a cost of $70,000, was dedicated as Metropolitan AME Church at 1518 M St. NW.

Now, 89 years later, the mortar holding those bricks together has deteriorated and in some places fallen out, showing the decay of the edifice designed in the Victorian gothic style popular in America in the 1880s.

If the congregation can raise enough money in the next year, Metropolitan AME Church, designated the denomination's national church and an institution linked closely with the black history of Washington, will be restored in a $1.2 million remodeling project.

If the project is completed, the AME church, dwarfed by office buildings, would be the only black congregation remaining in the downtown area, roughly lying west of 14th Street, south of Massachusetts Avenue, east of Rock Creek and north of the Mall.

Recently, another black congregation, Nineteenth Street Baptist Church formerly at 19th and I Streets NW, vacated its building and moved away from the center city to Upper Northwest.

In 1973 Metropolitan AME was designated by the Joint Committee on Landmarks of the National Capital Area as a structure that should be restored and preserved "if possible" because of its significance to the city. Until that designation was made, the congregation was divided on the question of whether to stay or move. Now it is determined to stay.

"We decided if it was good enough for them to select it, it should be good enough for us to restore it," said Robert Kelly, who is supervising the Metropolitan AME building program.

"We have a lot of senior citizens whose mothers and fathers helped build this church, and this is the only landmark that's left to represent their families," he said. Two-thirds of the congregation are senior citizens.

A strong advocate of the preservation project is the Rev. Robert Pruitt, 42, pastor of the 1,000 member, upper-middle-class black church since 1972.

"It's the last black citadel for religion in downtown Washington," he observed. "It is the national AME church and it should be accessible to those who visit the city." He said he came here "undecided" about the restoration.

"With the Bicentennial coming, what really do we have to show for black folk in this city, with the exception of Frederick Douglass' home?" he asked. "And beyond that, what do we have to show for holding black people together but the church?" Mr. Pruitt estimates that moving the congregation would cost $3.5 million.

The church is rich in history. Abolitionist Frederick Douglass' funeral was held there in 1895, and his regular pew in the church is marked by a glass plaque. The sanctuary still displays the silver candelabra he gave the congregation.

The church also served as a rostrum for Eleanor Roosevelt, President William Howard Taft and black educator Mary McLeod Bethune.

In its early years the church consisted of only a basement and ground floor and was "an eyesore" to the surrounding residential area, according to Josie Johnson, a member who has spent five years researching the church's history.

Slaves who escaped to the church were sheltered there, and the congregation "passed the hat" and bought their freedom, she said.

Some current members have ties with the church's founding. Nettie Vance, a current member, recalls that her "brothers were water boys who carried the buckets down the street so the people could clean the bricks" when the church was being built.

In the 1960s, the congregation turned down sale offers from the neighboring Washington Post and the American Chemical Society despite vociferous appeals from then church pastor, the Rev. G. Dewey Robinson, to move out to residential areas.

"Just like a store or a post office or a school, you have to be where your customers are, and most of our congregation no longer lives in the downtown area," he was reported as saying in 1967. The next year, Mr. Robinson became a bishop and left Metropolitan.

Mr. Pruitt, a dynamic preacher, is known to be campaigning for election as bishop at the denomination's quadrennial General Conference in 1976.

"This would help him . . . All of them (ministers) like to have something to campaign on like building a new church or something," said Kelly, a member since 1925.

While AME ministers are appointed by their bishops each year, they generally serve no more than four years in one church. Mr. Pruitt's two predecessors, Mr. Robinson and the Rev. Frank Madison Reid, became bishops.

Kelly said the restoration proponents realize they must lay the groundwork for the project and collect the needed capital in case Mr. Pruitt leaves. Otherwise they would have to convince the next minister of the value of the project and build a new momentum among the congregation.

Mr. Pruitt said he wants the job finished by "the first Sunday in June, 1975."

"This church represents so much to people, whether they are members or not. I rode with a man in a taxi, and when I pulled up here, he said, 'Oh, I graduated from that church.' High school graduations (and Howard University's) used to be held here because of the size of the auditorium," Mr. Pruitt recalled.

"If we take churches out of the heart of the city, what have we got? We still represent an oasis in a concrete jungle."

Metropolitan Church is used four or five times each week as a downtown auditorium for many groups, white and black, church-affiliated or not, Kelly said.

"We have a lot of protesting groups and what have you. I don't know how they come to know about this church, but I get so many calls," he said. Up to 200 demonstrators slept on the church floor in the '60s during the peace demonstrations at the White House, a half mile away.

As outlined by Turner Associates architects, the remodeling would replace the original slate roof, seal the bricks with new mortar and a protective water-repellent coating, install new gutters and downspouts, strengthen the original wooden window frames, and restore the brilliance of the stained glass windows, including 18 original memorial windows dedicated to bishops, denominational departments and districts.

That would be the major exterior work on the red brick, granite-trimmed church with its towers, vertical buttresses, pinnacles and decorative iron finials.

Inside, the partially excavated basement would be turned into usable rooms, and the library, rest rooms, kitchen, conference room, nursery and general entrance area on the ground floor would be enlarged, modernized, plastered, painted and, in some cases relocated.

The large hall partitioned with sliding doors on Sundays for classrooms, would be refurbished, and an elevator would be installed at the rear.

The second-floor sanctuary, reached by two sweeping gothic staircases of ash with walnut reeding, would be replastered, repainted and carpeted. The original pipe organ would be reconstituted, and new lighting would be installed. The administrative offices also would be remodeled.

The entire building would have new electrical wiring, plumbing, heating and a fire alarm.

If another $600,000 could be raised, Mr. Pruitt said, he would like to buy a vacant brick building across the street for a day-care center, social service programs and classrooms.

The congregation has raised $100,000, and Mr. Pruitt said he needs about $300,000 before refurbishing can begin. He intends to raise $250,000 from the congregation alone "by September or October." He also is making appeals to public and private agencies, businesses and individuals. The balance is to be borrowed.
